Mary, in addition on the public access language, we need to add to the allowable exemptions "usership patterns". As in something on the order of - public safety, features, or to accommodate usership patterns, as defined by administrative rule.

Yes, I know the term may be a bit nebulous, but that is the language that was agreed to, with the understanding that the definition would be determined through public hearing and the rule process (including legislative review of the rule)!

We'd like to see one additional change to the amended version of AB 304. We'd like to add (5)(c) to read, "5(c) Land acquired or managed under s.23.17." This would exempt the Ice Age Trail which has to meet all sorts of other signage requirements as a national trail and is already very well posted. I think the Natural Resources Committee agreed to this request and attempted to get at the issue by excluding "easements for trails" (5)(a) in their amendment. The problem is that this does not include portions of the trail that are purchased outright.
